WHO LET POG™ OUT OF THE BOTTLE?

The Old Fashioned Game of The Future™
Long before POGmania™ reached your fair town, there were milkcaps, and milkcap games. In fact, milkcap games have been played for decades.

Years ago, when milk still came in glass bottles, boys and girls nearly everywhere collected and played with the round, wax coated cardboard disks that sealed every bottle of milk.

FACTOID: Before the mid 1960's, almost all milk was sold in reusable glass bottles. Pretty amazing, huh?
But as cardboard and plastic milk containers began replacing glass bottles, milkcaps and milkcap games both nearly disappeared.

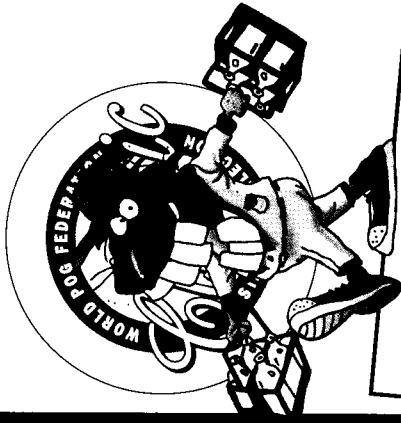

Awesome Blossom & Her Way Cool Kids
In 1991, a very wise and insightful teacher living in Hawaii, Blossom Galbiso, decided to introduce her students to the simple milkcap game she had enjoyed so much as a child.

Naturally, her students loved the game. And they loved the colorful caps she got for them at the Haleakala Dairy on Maui.

But because the disks they played with were printed with the name POG™, a popular blend of local fruit juices (Passion fruit, Orange & Guava), the game quickly became known as "POG".
Today, there are enthusiastic POG™ milkcap players, collectors and traders (just like you) all over the world.

IT DOESN'T TAKE MUCH TO GO POG WILD!

Once upon a time, all milkcaps were created equal. But times have changed....

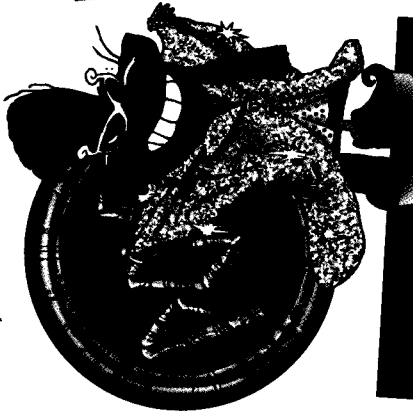

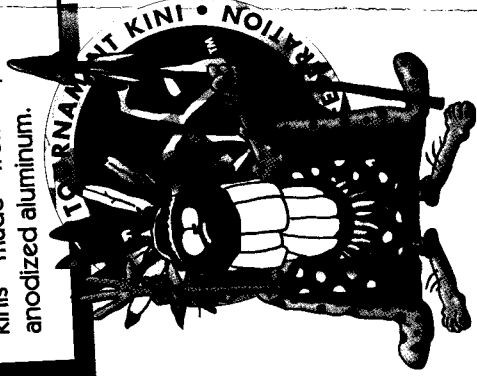

POG™ CLASSICS

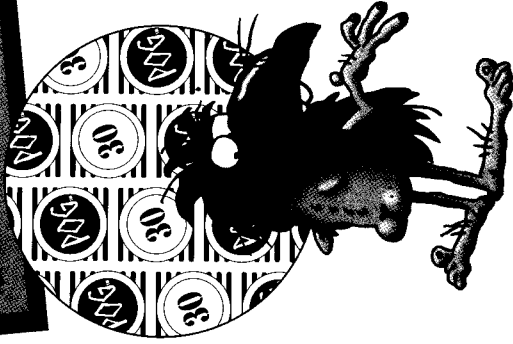

Classic POG™ milkcaps are manufactured by Stanpac, the world's only maker of "genuine" milkcaps. Each one features a thumb tab, pick-out, staple and special wax coating. And because of their exceptional action and excellent bounce, the World POG Federation endorses their use in all official tournament play.

POG™ KINIS

"Kini" is the Hawaiian word for king. POG™ kinis are used as "slammers" or "hitters". So, they are larger, thicker and heavier. The first kinis were made by gluing two paper milkcaps together. Today, kinis are made from a variety of materials, like plastic and metal. Blasters are special kinis made from special anodized aluminum.

CHECK THE BACK, JACK!
Only 100% authentic POG brand milkcaps carry the official POG™ logo of their maker. It's your assurance of genuine POG quality, value and collectibility. So invest in the best. And remember to always look for the POG brand logo.

THE BASIC GAME

Before playing "for keeps" or "just for fun", each player must agree to the rules. And each must contribute an equal number of POG milkcaps to a single, common stack. All milkcaps should be stacked - face up - on the official WPF gameboard.

1. To determine who goes first, flip a POG milkcap or play Ro-Sham-Bo (Paper, Scissors, Rock).

2. The first player slams their Kni! at the stack. All POG milkcaps landing face down go to that player.

3. All POG milkcaps remaining face up are restacked for the next player's attempt to flip the stack.

4. Players alternate turns until every POG milkcap has been flipped and won. The player with the most POG milkcaps is declared the overall winner.

POG BASEBALL™

Here's another way to score plenty of fun with POG milkcaps. Use extra POG milkcaps to keep track of any runners "on base".

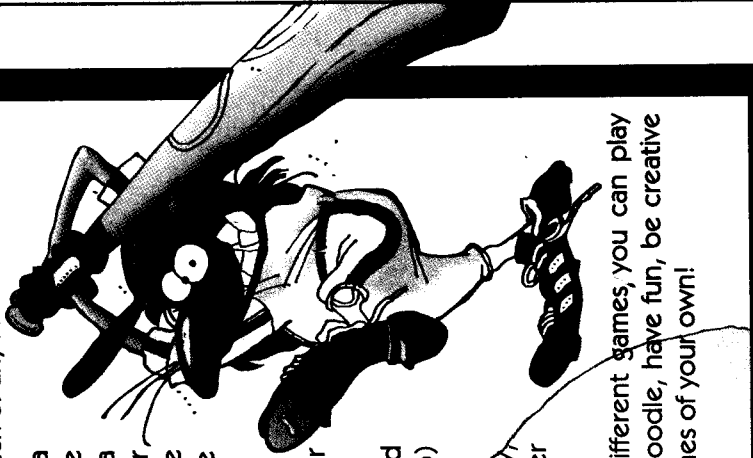

1. The player who's "up" throws at a stack of four POG milkcaps. If one is flipped, it's a single. Two are a double. Three are a triple. Four are a home run. If no milkcaps are flipped it's an out. Restack the stack after each throw.

2. When the first player who's "up" has three outs, it's the other player's turn to throw for a "hit".

3. As in baseball, "runs" are scored when a "runner" (POG milkcap) reaches "home".

4. After 6 or 9 "innings" play just like baseball. The player with the most runs wins.

Baseball is just one of a zillion different games you can play with POG milkcaps. Use your noodle, have fun, be creative and invent some POG milkcap games of your own!

What's the big idea? POG: THE GAME™ a humongous box that's jam-packed with enough milkcaps and kinis so the whole family can slam and jam together. Other goodies include a 100% authentic, tournament quality gameboard with an interchangeable playing surface, a spiffy POG™ gamebook and lots more. We're talking big time fun here! So check it out wherever authentic POG™ brand milkcaps are sold. And be the first on your block with the biggest and the best!
